The Rivers State Police Command has arrested two suspects in connection with the death of a young woman, identified simply as Eno, who was allegedly knocked down by a vehicle believed to be part of a convoy on the campus of Rivers State University (RSU), Port Harcourt.

The victim, said to be in her early 20s, was reportedly struck along Road A within the university premises on Tuesday evening. Witnesses said the impact threw her onto the tarred road, causing severe head injuries that resulted in her death.

Sources said confusion erupted after the incident as some vehicles in the convoy allegedly sped away from the scene upon discovering that the young woman had died.

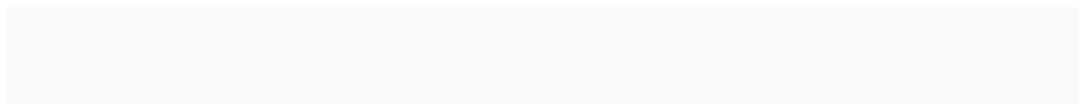

The incident prompted an immediate response from the university's security personnel and officers of the Nigeria Police Force, who sealed all exit points within the campus in an effort to track down those involved.

Investigations by operatives of the Nkpolu Divisional Police Headquarters, led by the Divisional Police Officer, CSP Henry Ogbuefi, in collaboration with the university's internal security team, led to the arrest of two suspects.

The suspects, identified as Onunaka K. and Daniel Ikechi, are said to be students of the institution and drivers of a Toyota Camry Spider and a Mercedes-Benz E300, respectively.

They were taken into custody at the Nkpolu Divisional Police Headquarters in Mile 3, Diobu, while the remains of the deceased were recovered and deposited in a mortuary.

When contacted, the spokesperson for Rivers State University, Victor Banigo, said the institution would issue an official statement on the incident later.

The spokesperson for the Rivers State Police Command, ASP Agabe Blessing Kaborlo, confirmed that two persons had been arrested in connection with the fatal accident.
