A 38-year-old grilled fish seller, Victor Fajemirokun, has narrated how he conspired with an herbalist and his apprentice, to kill a 38-year-old senior Road Safety Corps officer, Funmilayo Lasisi and his 12-year-old daughter, to assuage his destiny.

Victor, an Osogbo-based grilled fish seller, confirmed that he is the boyfriend of Funmilayo but lured her to a herbalist's house in Ijebu-Jesa to kill her.

Parading the suspects, the state Commissioner of Police (CP), Ibrahim Gotan, said Victor was reported missing/kidnapped on November 2, and his men found his car at Ikoyi on Ibadan/Ife Expressway.

He said the investigation led to the arrest of Gboyega Daramola, the herbalist known as Aberefa, who confessed that Victor lured a woman and her daughter to his place where they were killed for a money ritual.

Gotan said on November 17, the herbalist led them to Esa-Odo Dam where they dumped the remains of the victims with vital parts missing. Subsequently, one Sunday James, an apprentice of the herbalist, was arrested. He confessed to have slaughtered the mother and her child on the instructions of his boss.

Victor said he had consulted an Alfa, who told him that his girlfriend(Road Safety officer), was behind his predicament and impeding the speed of his destiny.

Victor said he fled Ijebu Jesa to Ikoyi where he initially told them at home that he went to pray. After, he abandoned his car and ran to Ibadan, later to Ghana where he was nabbed and repatriated.

The herbalist also corroborated Victor confirming that he was the one who called his apprentices to help him carry out the killing.

Also, one of the apprentices, Sunday James said: “I am the one who slaughtered Funmi and her daughter on the instruction of my boss. He threatened me that I must not disobey his instructions.”

The CP said efforts were ongoing to arrest other apprentices who are at large and that, subsequently, they would be charged in court.
