A 44 year old UK- returnee, Samson Agidotan, who was kidnapped in Delta State and murdered, has been buried. Samson returned to Nigeria to reunite with his family, but was kidnapped by his assailants on January 24, this year, and murdered.

His decaying body was only discovered on February 17, three weeks after, in a bush. His killing was linked to land inheritance, for which, it is believed his assailants suspected he returned to claim.

The victim was laid to rest at his hometown in Okpanam, Oshimili North Local Government Area of the state.

His intimate friend, Omoike Erewele, expressed shock that his UK number suddenly went off the moment he left London, said his gruesome murder in Nigeria left nothing to be desired in his fatherland. He described him as a "humble, kind, peaceful and hardworking young man."
