

Police Confirm 30 Alleged Politically Motivated Killings In Osun

New Telegraph-Admin

July 8, 2026

1 minute read

Police yesterday confirmed 30 cases of alleged politically motivated killings ahead of the August 15 Osun State governorship election. Force Public Relations Officer (FPRO) CSP Anietie Iniedu this when he appeared on Channels TV programme, "Morning Brief".

Speaking during the programme, monitored by the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN), he said a few arrests had been made.

According to him, they have paraded some of the suspects, with some taken to court. Iniedu said: "From the complaints received, we cannot rule out the involvement of some politicians in the killings."

However, he declined giving details of the cases, the suspects and their accomplices, as, according to him, doing so would amount to sub judice and a media trial. Iniedu promised that the details would be provided when investigations are completed and when the cases in court are determined.