Patients took to their heels on Wednesday in Jos, Plateau State, when gunmen invaded the Jos University Teaching Hospital (JUTH).

Daily Independent gathered that the gunmen who came in through the Laminga end of the hospital gate in a private car, tried to force their way in without being checked by the security guards.

However a scuffle ensued when the guards insisted on searching the booth of the car.

The guards were said to have succeeded in opening and boot and to their shock discovered a cache of arms inside.

Though the mission of the gunmen was not clear, the guards immediately raised the alarm. The gunmen then shot one of them and immediately sped off.

The security man was immediately rushed to the emergency unit of the hospital where attempts to save his life failed.

The incident threw the entire hospital into panic as some patients tried to discharge themselves, while others on routine visit hurriedly left the hospital.

Police Public Relations officer, Deputy Superintendent of Police (DSP) Emmanuel Abuh, confirmed the attack.

He said the police commissioner, Mr. Nasiru Oki, has deployed security personnel to the hospital following the incidence.

“Efforts are in top gear to ensure that the perpetrators of the act are arrested and brought to book,” he said.

Abuh appealed to citizens of the state to remain calm as the police is out to ensure safety of its citizens.
