Nigeria: Collapsed building kills 2 in Lagos

Lagos, Nigeria - Two persons were killed when a building collapsed in Nigeria's economic capital city of Lagos on Saturday, according to the National Emergency Management Agency (NEMA).

NEMA's zonal spokesman Ibrahim Abdulkadir told journalists that three persons were also rescued from the ruins of the building, which was apparently under construction.

The building was situated at Mafoluku, Oshodi, on the outskirts of the city.

It was the latest in a series of building collapse recorded in Lagos and elsewhere across the country.

Building experts have blamed the incessant collapse of buildings on the use of sub-standard building materials and the engagement of unqualified persons for building construction, among others.
