Trained in the Nigerian Armed Forces Command and Staff college Jaji, Kaduna and the Ghana Armed Forces Command and Staff College Teshie, Ghana, Group Captain Akinduro's murder has again thrown up questions of our national security. How come that persons can easily decide to carry out criminal acts, succeed in them and also go undetected. The military owe his widow and three children the knowledge of those who killed their husband, father and bread winner.

"Until his new posting, Akinduro was deputy director of defence information department. In fact, it was the department that organised the send-forth party to mark his new promotion from the department to the NDA."

in Kaduna and had grown steadily over the years to the present rank.

He has also held several military postings at both the defence headquarters and the Nigerian Air Force (NAF).
