The alleged killer was also said to have raped and killed a seven-year-old daughter of the deceased lecturer Jewel.

This revelation was made on a day the British police, New Scotland Yard, operatives commenced a nine-day training on anti-terrorism for about 30 Nigerian police officers at the Force Headquarters, Abuja.

Parading the suspects, the Deputy Inspector-General of Police (DIG, Investigations), Mr. Isreal Ajao, disclosed that the suspect had killed the former lecturer for undisclosed reasons and made away with undisclosed sum of money and her two telephone handsets.

Ajao told journalists that the suspect was engaged by the deceased for menial job in her building located at Udoka Housing Estate, Awka, Anambra State, but the suspect turned round and killed his benefactor.

"Between 20th and 21st day of January, 2009, the deceased contracted the under mentioned along with Michael Madu and Goodnews Ikechukwu to do a menial job in her new house at the Udoka Housing Estate. They were to move sand from the frontage of the house into the compound as minor finishing was going on.

"On Saturday 24th January, 2009, Wisdom Onyekwa went back to the house but this time, not for the menial job. Instead, he killed the woman, raped and strangled her 7-year old daughter, stole unspecified amount of money and took away the deceased's two GSM phones and fled the house," the DIG disclosed.

He stated that it was when one Ebele, a neighbour to the deceased who observed that the labourer she noticed in the morning had left the compound without completing the job and left the gates to the building open that she came into the premises, but suspecting foul play, contacted a relation to the deceased, who used his spare keys to open the doors to the building only to discover that the deceased had been killed.

The police boss said it was with the use of the GSM handset that they were able to track the suspects, who confessed to the crime.

The main suspect, Onyekwa confirmed the killing but pleaded for leniency. Other people who had earlier been engaged by the dead lecturer for same menial job, Madu and Ikechukwu told the journalists that though they did not participate in the killing, they were sure the principal suspect killed the woman and her child.

Onyekwa, who had to face them openly while the reporters were there, pretended to be sobbing saying "I have told them the truth, I have confessed; I plead for pardon; I will sign any document, I will not do it again."

The Inspector-General of Police, Mr. Ogbonna Onovo, who declared the training open, noted that due to the sophistication of terrorists, it has become imperative that regular training be conducted for all security personnel so as to combat their activities.

He thanked the British and American governments for the assistance rendered to the police, stressing that the training would not be in vain.
