From Andrew Agbese, Jos

A veterinary doctor, Dr. Ita Umoh, was killed Sunday night in his home in Vom, near Jos.

The death of Umoh came barely five days after Dr. Osa-reti Osagie, a medical doctor, was killed in his house. Dr. Ita who was a retiree with the National Veterinary Research Institute (NVRI) was said to have been attacked with knives and cudgels as there were cuts all over his body.

The police spokesman, Mohammed Lerama, confirmed the killing, saying they were still investigating the matter. Itah had retired from the NVRI and had picked up appointment with a milk manufacturing company in the area before his death.
