Two officials of the Nigerian Security and Civil Defense Corps (NSCDC) in Adamawa State have been found dead in their guest room in Bille village of Demsa Local Government Area where they went on special assignment.

According to sources, the incident which occurred Wednesday was caused by fumes from a power generator being used to charge computer batteries for the ongoing voters' registration exercise.

Daily Trust learnt that the two officials were found dead when neighbours did not sight any occupant of the room while its generator, put a day before the incident continued to work.

The state deputy commandant, Mr Adekunle Paul, ruled out any foul play and described the incident as a great shock, saying they may have died as a result of the fumes. "The door to the room was bolted from the back, the door was forced open by the neighbours and the door was not locked from outside. The neighbours discovered the dead bodies after they forced the door open," he said.
