The Ogun State Police Command on Saturday lost the officer in charge of its Anti-robbery team, state CID Eleweran, Superintendent of Police Folahan Ogunkoya in an auto crash.

It was gathered that incident occurred along the Sagamu/Abeokuta express way.

It was further gathered that the officer who was driving a Honda Accord car with registration number; Lagos MZ 717 AAA, lost control and crashed at Asu village along the Sagamu/Abeokuta Express way around 4pm on Saturday.

Fola Ogunkoya was born in Ijebu Ode, Ogun State, in 1972. Before his appointment into the Nigeria Police Force as a Cadet Assistant Superintendent of Police on May 1, 2000, he attended the Ogun State University, where he bagged a Bachelor of Arts degree in Linguistics. He also acquired a Master of Science degree from Leeds University in the United Kingdom.

The command's Police Public Relations Officer DSP Muyiwa Adejobi in a statement described Ogunkoya as a gallant Officer, "a seasoned and loved police officer with characteristics worthy of emulation in our society".

He added, "The state Commissioner of Police Ikemefuna Okoye commiserates with officers and men of the command, members of his family in Ijebu Ode, friends and the good people of the state on the sudden demise of such a wonderful crime buster".
