

burnt due to the level of setting the hubby ablaze.
May be it was just some kind of an

was not allowed to speak with the suspect who is still in police custody.

Troops kill more terrorists, recover arms — WDHQ

By Ronald Mutum

The Defence headquarters yesterday said troops on patrol dislodged terrorists from their hide-out in Djimitillo on Damaturu road.

A statement by the Defence spokesman Major General Chris Olukolade said the troops recovered some arms and dismantled the terrorists' group's flags hoisted in the towns.

The statement said, "Troops on cordon and search along Djimitillo Damaturu road axis on Friday night had an encounter with a group of terrorists after their hideout was discovered by troops.

"The fierce fight to dislodge them from the location which is very close to a market, resulted in the capture of machine guns and rifles as well as the death of some number of them.

"Some of the terrorists are believed to have died in the fire that gutted the house where they had made their base. A soldier was killed, while another was wounded. He is undergoing treatment," Olukolade said.

The statement added that, "In Gulak, Adamawa State, troops in pursuit of terrorists caught up with some of them who were in the process of blowing up a bridge to deter troops advance.

"The terrorists were not lucky as they died in their encounter with troops. The troops are continuing with the cordon and search of the town and environs after overpowering the terrorists."