

■ Suspects paraded by the police in Imo State at the command's headquarters in Owerri on Tuesday.

Man allegedly kills lover during sex

An Iyaganku chief magistrates' court sitting in Ibadan, Oyo State on Tuesday remanded a 50-year-old man, Fatai Busari, for allegedly causing the death of a woman during sexual intercourse.

The Chief magistrate, Mrs Abiona Richard, ordered the remand of Busari at the Agodi prison, pending legal advice from the Directorate of Public Prosecutions (DPPs).

The News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) reports that Busari of Asaka area of Ibadan was arraigned on a one-count charge of causing death.

The prosecutor, Cpl. Salewa Hammed, told the court that Busari on Oct. 10, at about 3:00p.m. at Asaka area, Ibadan, unlawfully caused the death of one Sadiat Adejuwon, 48.

Hammed said the death of Adejuwon occurred while Busari was having sexual intercourse with her in his house.

"Busari and the deceased woman worked as casual workers cleaning the street and they were dating.

"On the fateful day, Busari drank herbal concoction to boost his manhood before sleeping with her.

"It was afterwards that he realised that something was amiss when he noticed blood flowing out of her private part.

"She later died at the spot and he raised alarm," the prosecutor said.

Hammed said that the offence committed contravened Section 316 and was punishable under Section 319 of the Criminal Code, Cap 38, Vol. II, Laws of Oyo State, 2000.

NAN reports that if Busari is found guilty of the offence, he will face the death sentence.