

One person killed as OPC factional members clash in Osun

From Hameed Oyegbade, Osogbo

2 A clash between two factions of the Oodua Peoples Congress (OPC) in Osun State yesterday has claimed the life of one person, while many others sustained injuries. The fight, at the Ikoyi community in Isokan local government, caused panic in the area. Many residents of the community said such fights had become regular, though.

A resident of the community identified, in a chat with our correspondent, the young man who died in yesterday's clash as Bolaji Owolewa.

The clash, according to witnesses, started from an argument between a member of the Oodua Peoples Congress Initiative, Nurudeen Emiola, and a member of the Oodua Peoples Congress, Abiodun Ogunjimi.

The Osun State Commissioner of Police, Mr Undie Adie, confirmed the incident.
