Abutu further said law and order had been restored by the command, adding that security had been beefed up in the area.

Daily Trust gathered that the crisis started Saturday night when one cult group member was killed near the city hall at Odo Oja area.

The cult member was said to have come from Port Harcourt on Friday to attend a friend's wedding before he was killed by a rival cult group.

The killing later reportedly snowballed into bloodletting with suspected cultists shooting in different directions in the community, leaving at least five cult members dead on Sunday.
