

Meanwhile, a group of bandits, on Tuesday night, invaded Anguwar Algaita village in the Randagi Ward of Birnin Gwari Local Government Area in Kaduna.

They abducted 12 residents, including women and adults, leaving their families in the dark about the condition of the victims.

However, on Wednesday evening, local residents discovered two bodies in a nearby bush, among those who had been kidnapped by the bandits.

Shehu Randagi, a youth leader in the area, confirmed to Daily Trust that the deceased individuals were believed to have been killed for refusing to follow the bandits into the bush. He also mentioned that a third person was found alive but had sustained a bullet wound. The injured person was rushed to Birnin Gwari Hospital for medical treatment.

Both of the bodies discovered were male, and the bandits continued to terrorise the local population. Shehu appealed to the state and federal governments to come to their aid.

Efforts to contact the state Police Command Public Relations Officer, ASP Mansir Hassan, were unsuccessful as his phone line didn't connect and he did not reply to a text message regarding the incident.
