

Man Dies Of 'Self-Inflicted' Knife Injury In Fight With Neighbour

By Mumini Abdulkareem, Ilorin

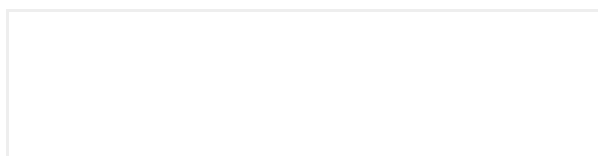

Mon, 18 Nov 2024 4:28:11 WAT

A middle-aged man, simply identified as Koko, has reportedly died after inflicting knife injury on himself during a disagreement with a neighbour.

The incident, it was learnt, occurred at the Olorunshogo area, Ilorin West LGA.

The deceased is said to be the driver of a timber transporter.

SPONSOR AD

City and Crime gathered that the deceased, known for his shot temper and recalcitrant attitude to people, had a disagreement with one of his neighbours known as Wasiu.

- NDLEA intercepts drug consignments in Lagos, Abuja airports
- 60-year-old driver dies after falling into well

“In the process, he reached for a knife and threatened to stab his opponent with it. But in the process, he cut himself in the lap.

“He lost a lot of blood and died shortly after he got to a hospital,” a resident of the area said.

When contacted, the spokeswoman of the state police command, Toun Ejire-Adeyemi (DSP), confirmed the incident.

She said it was a case of suicide, adding however that the case was still under investigation.