The pregnant wife was rescued in a state of unconsciousness but is strongly believed to have lost her unborn.

Though the cause of the death has not been confirmed, neighbours said it may have arisen from exhaust fumes, which they may have inhaled from their power-generating set, said to have been kept in their bathroom.

Neighbours who spoke when The Guardian visited the area yesterday, said they became worried when on Sunday morning their neighbours did not come out of their apartment, which was unusual.
