VIOLENCE again erupted yesterday in Borno State, as gunmen suspected of Boko Haram insurgents, attacked Government Girls' Secondary School, Wulgo in Gambouru/Ngala Council Area of the state, killing a teacher and injuring another.

In a related development, six Boko Haram terror suspects were yesterday arrested in Maiduguri by members of the state Vigilance Youths Group (BVYG) at a petrol station near the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (NNPC) depot while buying fuel.

According to an eyewitness, Ibrahim Isa and police authorities at the Gambouru/Ngala Divisional Police Station, three terror suspects came on motorcycles and shot dead a teacher, Mallam Lawan Manga and injured his colleague, Akura Walbintu, resident in the school premises.

The Borno State Police Commissioner, Lawan Tanko, confirmed the incident, stating that none of the suspects was arrested.

According to a vigilance youth leader, Yakubu Isa, the terror suspects came in two pick-up vehicles with empty drums to buy fuel at one of the petrol station on Bama road.
