A 19-year-old automobile apprentice, Dauda Musa, has been apprehended by the Kogi state police command for allegedly killing his colleague, 12-year-old Abdulsalami Isah.

The incident followed a misunderstanding between the accused and the deceased.

The police also paraded one David Ojile Onoja, 42, of Adokpe-Ette village of Olamaboro local government area of Kogi state for allegedly killing his friend, Joseph Adeyemi, in an attempt to steal the deceased's Toyota Camry car.

Parading the suspects before newsmen in Lokoja, the state capital, commissioner of police, Saidu Madawaki, said Musa and Isah, both apprentices under one Abdulsalami Abdullahi of Bako quarters, Adavi local government area of the state, fought over a spanner. During the scuffle, the deceased hit the suspect with a stick. Musa in turn hit the deceased on the forehead with a shaft. Isah sustained injuries and was rushed to a nearby hospital. He died the third day.

On Onoja's case, Madawaki said the accused lured Adeyemi from Abuja to his village. He, subsequently, took the deceased to an isolated place. And while Adeyemi slept, Onoja struck him with a hammer, leaving him in a pool of blood. The police got wind of the incident, rushed to the scene, and found the deceased who managed to make helpful disclosures, leading to the arrest.

Also, some suspects who specialised in robbing their victims with toy guns were paraded before reporters.

The police said all the suspects, following completion of investigations, would be charged to court.
