BARELY a month after a similar attack on a new generation bank, armed robbers Tuesday raided another new generation bank in the Enugu Campus of the University of Nigeria (UNN), carting away millions of naira from its Automated Teller Machine (ATM).

The Guardian learnt that the bandits, numbering about six, took advantage of last night's heavy downpour, even as they killed two policemen and a female visitor to one of the guards on duty at the bank.

"The robbers came in the middle of the night and shot the two policemen without resistance," the source said on condition of anonymity. "One of them died on the spot, while the second died on the way to hospital."

"After that, they ordered the other guards into the security room and tied them together. With this, they operated without hitch and succeeded in removing the three ATM machines. We also learnt that a girlfriend of one of the security men was equally shot."

Reacting to the situation, spokesman of the Enugu State Police Command, DSP Ebere Amaraizu, urged residents to remain calm as the police were already investigating the situation.
