10 feared dead in Maiduguri explosions, military disagrees

NO fewer than 10 people are feared dead after multiple explosions were heard in the outskirts of Maiduguri, the Borno State capital, yesterday. Residents say the bomb explosions started as early as 7am.

However, the military denied, saying the explosions came from an armed forces weapon testing programme.

"The sound of bomb explosions is being heard from Kayamla and Dalori along Bama Road since around 7:00 am today. We are not sure whether the terrorists are planning to invade the town but the sound vibrating is devastating," Kursi Yusuf, an employee at the University of Maiduguri, reportedly told the AFP.

Yesterday's attacks followed Friday night's Kuje and Nyanya bombings that claimed 18 lives and injured 41 others.

Security experts consider the recent attacks on Abuja as representing a disturbing rise in the number of bombings that have hit the Federal Capital Territory (FCT).
