

Daily Newsletter

Enter your email

Subscribe me! »

LATEST

Coordinated attacks on military bases in Burundi capital
12:30 pm

At least seven civilians killed in suicide attack in north Cameroon: local officials
12:10 pm

Saudi Arabia urges Syrian
President to step down or face forcible removal
12:05 pm

Fuel scarcity will end soon –
NUPENG
11:59 am

China's Xi and Obama
Paris climate summit
Beijing
11:35 am

Home / News / Metro / Seven-month old baby feared dead in Lagos fire

Seven-month old baby feared dead in Lagos fire

By Odita Sunday on December 11, 2015 1:55 am

Tweet

Like Share 0

A SEVEN-month-old baby was feared dead yesterday following a fire incident, which consumed a building at Ikota Housing Estate, in Lekki, Lagos State. The baby was said to have been locked up inside the house by his parents when the unfortunate incident occurred.

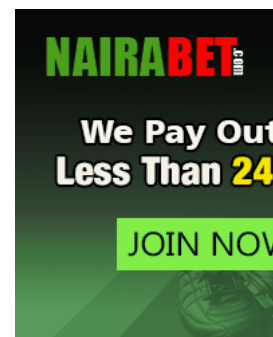

In a related development, a storey building at No. 22 Oduwole Street, Abule Odu Bus Stop, Egbeda, was gutted by fire. Spokesman of the Fire Service in Lagos, Mr. Rasaq Fadipe, noted that the quick intervention of fire service personnel prevented colossal loss in the two incidents.

The Guardian gathered that though no life was lost in the Egbeda fire, property worth millions of naira was destroyed by the inferno.

Lagos State police spokesman, Offor Joe, told The Guardian the command was not aware of the incident.

Tweet

Like Share 0

NAIRABET
We Pay Out
Less Than 24h
JOIN NOW

Find cars for you

Any Make Any Model
Min Price ▼	Max Price

Ford Explorer
Lagos - ₦1,650
Negotiable

Mitsubishi N
Lagos - ₦600,0

SEARCH FOR MORE ☒

TRENDING

Nigerians celebrate Eagles pick Rio ticket

Govt signs MoU
Huawei to create trainee jobs

Super Eagles' former coach