

Breaking News: Boko Haram kills 11 in Maiduguri

News | Nigeria | Metro

Police arrest man with fresh human parts in Osun

By Tunji Omofoye, Osogbo | 08 June 2017 | 4:14 am

Nigeria Police

Police authorities in Osogbo, Osun State capital yesterday arrested a 38-year-old man, identified as Ajibade Rasheed, with a fresh decapitated head of an old woman, including her private part, liver and intestine.

Other parts of the body found on the man include two palms, lungs and blood kept in a bottle. Parading the man with the strange discoveries, at the police headquarters, the Commissioner of Police, Mr. Fimiha Adeoye, said policemen on surveillance arrested the suspect at Oluode market, in Osogbo.

He said: "He was bringing the fresh human head and other vital organs of his victim from Aagba, a community in Boriipe local council of Osun State. We want to establish the identity of the victim and get to know where and how the victim was killed."

Adeoye said the police would get to the root of the dastardly act, adding that an accomplice to the suspect, who was in the vehicle in which the human head was found escaped and was being trailed by his men.

Rasheed, a native of Ikirun, said "I am an Alfa and herbalist. Somebody, who is known as Olorungbede came to me and said he wanted to do money ritual. I told him the materials for the job, which include fresh human head, private part of a woman and others and he said he would get it by himself." The man brought the fresh human head to me today. I am not the one who killed the woman."

The Guardian Manufacturing Excellence Awards 2017: Nominees

Latest

MORE >

Real Madrid call presidential election

7 mins ago

Sport

Boko Haram kills 11 in Maiduguri

20 mins ago

Nigeria

France's left and right fear Macron landslide

42 mins ago

World

Serbian papers lament Djokovic decline

1 hour ago

Tennis

Eight Southern Kaduna districts sign peace deal

1 hour ago

Nigeria

2 Comments

Guardian News

1 Login