If she had known that the farm work, which she had gone to do would be her last, she would probably have stayed back home. But oblivious of what awaited her, Susan Enejere had on Monday set out to her farm at Ugbene Ajima in Uzouwani local council of Enugu State.

It was, however, her last day on earth as she was murdered with her head severed from her body by her murderer.

The Guardian gathered that the young mother was trailed to her farm by one Tochukwu Idu Chianugo of Ugwuoda village in Nimbo, Uzouwani local council and allegedly snuffed life out of her.

Members of her family who awaited her return to no avail had the next morning alerted the villagers and a search party was raised with the assistance of the police.

According to the Police Public Relations Officer in Enugu, Ebere Amaraizu, Chianugo was arrested during the search and he “led the operatives to the place where he hid the beheaded victim.”

He stated that the headless body together with the severed head have been recovered and deposited in a nearby mortuary, while suspect would remain in detention until investigation was concluded.
