

In his next world, he will not make advances to married women, man tells police after killing neighbour

By Editor

05 June 2019 | 4:00 am

APC can't stop me from contesting for deputy Senate president, says Kalu

1 hour ago

Ekiti Assembly gets new speaker

54 mins ago

African Union suspends Sudan

39 mins ago

A 30-year-old man, Abubakar Muhammadu, has been killed by a 21-year-old man, Audu Umar, for making advances to his wife. Audu, who is currently in the custody of the Niger State police command, said he did not regret killing Muhammadu because he is fond of making advances to married women in the village.

He said he was satisfied with executing judgment on the victim, insisting he is ready to face the consequence of his action. "I do not regret killing him because Mohammadu decided to die like a chicken. In his next world, he will not make advances to married women in this village. I am ready to bear the consequences, so let the law take its cause. I am fulfilled Mohammadu will never see my wife again, Allah will judge him."

Audu and Muhammadu both hail from Wawa village in New Bussa in Borgu Local Government Area of Niger. It was gathered that the suspect's wife, Hassana Audu, reported to her husband that the deceased had disturbed her for a relationship, which she refused but he persisted.

The suspect claimed he had warned the deceased several times to desist from making advances on his wife, which he also refused and made him provoked beyond reason, when he attacked the deceased with a machete, inflicted deep cuts on his head, which resulted to his death.

The Niger command's Public Relations Officer, Mohammad Abubakar, said the matter would be charged to court after investigation.

