Meanwhile, a joint security team of the Benue State Police Command's Operation Zenda, has recovered the decomposed remains of one Mrs. Bridget Ihom, who was killed by armed bandits from a shallow grave.

It was learnt that unknown gunmen had in May this year killed a police officer serving in Katsina-Ala division, Abraham Ihom and his wife, Bridget in Zaki-Biam, Ukum Council Area of the state.

However, their killers were revealed when a team of Operation Zenda led by SP Justin Gberindyer waded into the matter and recovered Bridget's decomposed remains, but Sergeant Ihom's corpse has not been found as at the time of filing this report.

Sources from the area disclosed that men of Operation Zenda also arrested some suspects in connection with the murder of the couple.

Reacting to the development, Ihom's family members commended Gberindyer and his team, the Nigerian Police and Governor Samuel Ortom for intensifying the war against crime in the state.

Men of Operation Zenda had uncovered a mass grave in Ushongo Council Area where kidnapped victims were killed and buried, a discovery that led to the arrest of six suspects who were recently arraigned in court.

Police Public Relations Officer (PPRO), DSP Catherine Anene, who confirmed the development, said the suspects were already being transferred to the state Police Command in Makurdi, adding that the Commissioner of Police (CP), Mukkadas Garba, would soon brief the media on the matter.
