

FCT Police probe death of popular Abuja Chef

From Odita Sunday, Abuja

DETECTIVES of the Federal Capital Territory Police Command have commenced a manhunt for killers of a popular Nigerian chef, Emeka Eloagu, who was found dead in his Abuja home.

FCT police spokesman, Mariam Yusuf told The Guardian that they had launched an investigation aimed at unearthing the mystery behind his death. "We have launched an investigation on the matter."

While the cause of his death remains uncertain, an account by some of his friends claims he was stabbed to death by assailants, who gained access into his home.

Another account claims the deceased was killed by two persons, who he granted access to his apartment.

They allegedly stripped him naked, tied him up, and then strangled him.

Eloagui is the creative director of Helenes Food Company, an Abuja-based brand.

It was gathered that his lifeless body was found in his apartment on Sunday, August 1.

The deceased is survived by his wife and family members.

Parents tasked on children's moral development

By Jesutomi Akomolafe

TO curtail cultism and social vices among youths, parents have been asked to play active role in the development of their wards.

They were also asked to instill good virtues in their

He stressed the need for children to be creative, adopt critical thinking, communication and collaboration to ensure their success.

Omosowon, who advised government to assist private school with financial assistance to help in molding the