

Man kills pregnant wife in Enugu, 70-year old killed in Kogi

By Lawrence Njoku ,
Agnes Udosen (Enugu)
and Ibrahim Obansa
(Lokoja)

10 September 2021 |
3:03 am

Woman, 55, relative nabbed
for trafficking twins in Imo

9 hours ago

Enugu. Photo/YOUTUBE

There was tragedy yesterday when a pregnant woman was beaten to death by her husband at Uburu-ekwe Street, Ogbuagor Abakpa Nike Enugu.

It was gathered that the woman simply identified as Mama Goodluck was about eight months pregnant before her untimely death.

The mother of four, an eyewitness, Chibuike Ozo said, was beaten to stupor by her husband on Wednesday night and was rushed to a nearby hospital where she was confirmed dead.

The husband, simply identified as Eke Nwe Ofia, by neighbours deals on condemned iron at Nkpor Street, Abakpa and is alleged to be a drunk.

Ozo said: “The man came back last night and asked the wife for food. The woman told her she needs to feed her children first because the man didn’t drop money for food and the woman had to even source for the garri from neighbours so she can give her children.

18 Lagos-bound travellers
abducted in Ondo

9 hours ago

“The response by the woman obviously got her husband angry and he pounced on her mercilessly. Before we could come to her rescue, she had collapsed and we helped in rushing her to hospital where she was later confirmed dead in the early hours of Thursday.”

He also said that the beating isn’t a new thing, “when this pregnancy was about two months, the husband battered her and it took our intervention to save the woman that day.

Chief Security Officer (CSO) of the area, Mr. Ikechukwu Ukwuani confirmed the incident, saying the man has been handed over to the police.

Lady's corpse found in traditional ruler's SUV

9 hours ago

