

Anambra seeks justice for woman killed by pastor husband

ANAMBRA State Samuel Onuorah, from her neck and chest by rescue and give justice to their deceased daughter. Government, through the Abatete, uncle to the late Ibeabuchi. Ministry of Women and Ogechukwu, alleged that he He revealed that their doubts were cleared after Social Welfare, has waded got a call from her late niece's they went to the mortuary into the case of the alleged husband that her niece, where the said husband had murder of one Ogechukwu Ogechukwu, fell from a four- deposited their daughter's Okafor, allegedly macheted to storey building and died. corpse and saw evidently that death by her husband, Elijah The deceased's husband she didn't fall from any Emeka Ibeabuchi, a pastor. hails from Nimo in Njikoka building.

The incident, which happened on August 13, was reported to the ministry by the deceased's family following irregularities and threats by the alleged husband.

Narrating the incident, Mr

Local Council of the state. Seeking justice at the office of the Commissioner for Women Affairs, Mr Onuorah noted that they discovered that their daughter did not fall but was instead allegedly killed with a knife, stabbed in

The family of the deceased also alleged that Ibeabuchi intended to use their newborn baby for ritual purposes.

They urged the state government to come to their

In response, Ify Obinabo, the Commissioner of Women Affairs, urged stakeholders, women's groups, human rights activists, and social media users to support the government in ensuring that Ogechukwu receives justice.

She called on everyone to speak out about the matter and assured that she would inform the governor's wife, who she believes will personally take up the case and ensure justice for the deceased.