Nigeria's under-water workers, otherwise known as divers, have lost three of their members in separate mishap just as they are lamenting the absence of Divers-at-Work regulation and code.

President of the Nigerian Divers' Association, Thompson Ogegbene, who confirmed the sad occurrence, hinted that a panel has been set up to investigate the remote cause of the accident and possible ways of averting a re-occurrence in future.

Daily Independent gathered that one of the driver who died at Kainji Dam in Niger State during an operation was trapped under water for 11 days before his body surfaced.

The deceased, identified as Christopher Emerhe, was reportedly diving for an indigenous company at the Kainji Dam when the mishap occurred.
