

cussed next week in Abuja, when the India High Commission in Nigeria, in collaboration with the country's Ministry of

Ritual: Plateau police arrest man for killing son

By Onoja Audu Jos

PLATEAU State Police Commissioner, Chris Olakpe, has arrested a middle-aged man, Polycarp Dajan, who killed his three months old son for ritual in Jos.

The Command also arrested a man who beat his daughter to death in Bokkos, Mangu Local Government Area of the state, for bedwetting.

Also arrested were a group led by a woman, which snatched a Keke NAPEP and inflicted injuries on the rider in Jos while posing as passengers. Olakpe, who paraded the suspects at the state Police Command headquarters, on Thursday, said his men arrested 15 other persons for other criminal acts.

According to him, the command is out to frustrate the criminals in the state.

Mr. Dajan who allegedly killed his son for ritual purposes, told newsmen that he committed the crime, saying that he was lured in to it by a native doctor who promised him quick money if he supply the tongue of his first child.

According to the Plateau State Police boss, "On September 8, at about 1 p.m., a case of culpable homicide was reported at Bokkos Police Station where Polycarp Dajan, aged 20 was said to have suffocated his three months old baby boy to death.