As the Nigerian military continued to record successes in the fight against the Boko Haram sect in the North East, the Federal Government and the military high command have assured that the gains would be sustained until total victory is achieved.

This is as the military has taken full control of the Madagali and Michika, two local government areas in Adamawa State, and a few other settlements in Borno State that had fallen under the control of Boko Haram.

Last week, Nigerian troops engaged the insurgents in Bulabulin Ngaura village of Damboa LGA of Borno State, recording huge successes.

Although the number of insurgents killed during the operations, which occurred mostly between 5pm and 10pm, early in the week, could not be ascertained, a competent source said there was high casualty level on the part of the terrorists.
