One person has been reported dead and two in coma as a result of a fight between two factions of the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) from Eastern Obolo Local Government Area of Akwa Ibom State engaged themselves in scuffle.

The very tensed situation was however curtailed by heavy presence of uniformed men who shot sporadically into the air, as well as throw tear gas canisters during the PDP ward congress for the election of three ad hoc delegates in Uyo on Saturday, many people would have died.

According to one PDP member, Eyo Okon, three persons were beaten to state of coma, one later died, while the others who were also seriously injured were rushed to hospitals in coma.

“There was a serious fight between two factions of PDP from Eastern Obolo. From what we gathered there was disagreement as who were to make list of the delegates.

“The fight and shootings were so serious that people had to call Akpabio from his house to come and rescue the situation.

“Before the governor arrived, one person had already given up, while the others who were in coma had been taken to hospitals.” he narrated
