Scores of people were reportedly killed on Thursday when gunmen, suspected to be members of the Boko Haram sect, attacked Bajoga town in Funakaye Local Government Area of Gombe State.

An eyewitness said the gunmen invaded Bajoga between 5am and 6am while Muslim worshippers were concluding their usual early morning prayers.

They reportedly entered the town in a number of Toyota Hilux vans and started shooting on arrival, forcing residents to either remain indoors or flee into the bush for their lives.

The Divisional Police Headquarters and Police Area Command at Bajoga, as well as one of the banks in the town, were attacked and destroyed.

Our correspondent gathered that security agents engaged them in a gun battle for about three hours before eventually repelling them.

The assailants were said to have retracted and headed for Ashaka, another town in Funakaye Council Area, which they earlier attacked on October 30 and injured a policeman in the process.

The Gombe State Police Command Public Relations

Officer (PPRO), DSP Fwaje Atajiri, said normalcy had been restored in the affected areas.
