IT WAS a sad Tuesday at the Crawford University, Igbesa, Ogun State as the institution's Head of Public Relations Unit, Mr. Yomi Ojo, was confirmed dead following a fatal auto accident.

Ojo reportedly died on the Otta-Idiroko road while returning to his residence from the institution after the day's work.

It was learnt that an oncoming truck from the Otta end of the road rammed into the vehicle he was driving, resulting in his death instantly.

Vice Chancellor of the university owned by the Apostolic Faith Mission, Professor Samson Ayanlaja, confirmed the death to Daily Independent.

A former Executive Secretary of National Universities Commission (NUC) and Pro-Chancellor of the university, Professor Peter Okebukola, described Ojo's death as shocking and a huge loss to the entire university community and the church.

"He was a dutiful man and a blessing to Crawford University and the Apostolic Faith Mission. He is Godly and ready to put in everything to ensure the success of the university and the church in all areas. He will be greatly missed by all.

"May the good Lord grant his departed soul permanent rest. He was an orator, I must tell you I will miss him greatly," Okebukola lamented.

Also, Public Relations Officer, Bells University of Technology, Ota, Ogun State, Mr. Akeem Bello, said the academia especially, BELLSTECH will miss Ojo as a friend of the institution for his presence and support at events organised by the institution.
