Serial Killer Who 'Murdered Countless Security Personnel' Killed In Kogi

A notorious serial killer, Lukman Issah, aka Commander, has been killed by the Kogi State Police Command, according to the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN).

Lukman, according to the police, had killed six policemen and 19 Christian worshippers before he met his Waterloo in an operation led by the special anti-robbery Squad (SARS).

A statement by the command's spokesman, William Aya, said Lukman "was a vicious bloodletting, serial killer and arsonist."

"In the past years, he held forth in the crime world, leaving many deaths, robberies and arson on his trail.

"Countless number of uniformed personnel including policemen, soldiers and even prison officers posted to the state as well as other innocent Nigerians met their untimely death as they were murdered in cold blood by Lukman and his gang."

According to the police, Lukman, who hails from Emani Clan of Obeiba-Ihima area of Okehi local government area, "enjoyed a long reign from 2001 to Sept. 3, 2017 before it was cut short".
