

Man, 23, Killed By Rival Cult Group For Dumping It For Another Gang

JUSTICE IYASERE

LAGOS

A 23-year old man named, Ufuoma Tega, has been allegedly killed by a rampaging rival cult group at the Okwagbe community in Ughelli South Local Government Area of Delta State for allegedly leaving the group which has been terrorizing community and its environs for another rival gang.

INDEPENDENT gathered that Tega, a father of two, had renounced his membership of his former cult group, but not too long, he decided to join another gang in the town, this development, it was learnt, angered his former cult members.

The source added that some of the leaders of his former gang allegedly lured him to a place for supposed settlement, but instead he was severely beaten with dangerous weapons, leading to his death.

Police however swung into action immediately with the help of Okwagbe vigilante men, but are yet to apprehend the suspects.

A police source, who confirmed the incident, stated that the police have already launched a manhunt to fish out the fleeing hoodlums.

At the time of filing this report, Tega's corpse had been deposited at the mortuary of the General Hospital, Otu-Jeremi.