ASABA – Pandemonium struck Tuesday as the lifeless body of a missing seven-year-old boy, Fejiro Emoavworhe, was found at the bank of Ohovwe River in Ekiugbo, Ughelli North Local Government Area of Delta State.

Daily Independent gathered that the deceased was reported missing on Sunday, October 4, 2020.

The father of the deceased, Mr. John Emoavworhe of Ogbeode Street, Ekiugbo-Ughelli, who is barely four months old in the community disclosed that his brother in-law (name withheld) came to his house in the eve of Sunday, October 4, 2020, with slices of fried yam, ice cream and plastic bottles of coke for his children.

He said, “While we are still in search of Fejiro, my brother in-law left the compound in a hurry and when he was called upon by my family the next morning he said he is going to the church he eventually responded to my family’s invitation at about 7:00 p.m.

“My wife’s younger brother told my family that he did not know anything about Fejiro’s disappearance or whereabouts but he heard my neighbours saying that I used to beat my children and drive them out of home that this time around I will search for my child and I will not see him.”

“When his brother in-law was asked to direct them to the apartment, all the occupants of the apartment who are suspected ‘Yahoo Boys’ escaped through the back door.”

At the time of filing this report, it was gathered that the remains of Fejiro has been deposited at the Ughelli General Hospital’s mortuary for autopsy.

When contacted, Police Public Relations Officer (PPRO), DSP Onome Onovwakpoyeya, confirmed the incident.
