Gas Cooker Explosion Kills Student

BY SAM EGWU, Lokoja

The cooking innovation of applying scientific method in the society has resulted in the untimely death of a student of the College of Education (COE), Ankpa, Kogi state.

The victim, a credible source told LEADERSHIP, was Lucy Adejoh, a year three student of sociology/religious studies of the college, who was burnt beyond recognition.

The source told LEADERSHIP that the victim entered her rented house on campus on the faithful day oblivious that her gas-cooker had been on. She lighted a match which led to an explosion badly burning the lady.

According to a senior lecturer who craved anonymity, the burn suffered by the victim was so severe that all efforts by the medical team in the general hospital, Ankpa, to revive her proved futile.

She was confirmed dead on Saturday at the general hospital, Ankpa, of severe burns and suffocation as a result of what she suffered.
