BY KOLA NIYI-EKE, ASABA

A desperate housewife identified as Tochukwu (surname withheld) in Ogbolu, near Asaba Delta state has been reported to have allegedly offered her second son for money ritual purpose(s).

Police source who preferred anonymity said the evil act of the woman backfired when the child expected to "produce" money for her became "dumb" after which the husband was feared killed in a suspected food poison.

It was gathered that the woman had been indebted to two of her neighbours whom she borrowed close to N600, 000 offset the school fee of her first daughter an undergraduate at the Imo State University (IMSU).

But this was not to be when she failed to pay back her loan on the appointed time and her creditors threatened to make life unbearable for her.

While their threats lasted, our informed source said that she sought the help of a friend who allegedly introduced her to a native doctor in Onitsha, Anambra State who allegedly asked for human sacrifices.
