A usually credible security source who talked to LEADERSHIP in confidence said the military raid started on Sunday through Monday and ended on Tuesday. The source said soldiers of the 7 Division, Nigeria army acted on a tip-off that the terrorists were camping in bushes around Bitu village.

The military source said, “the recent attacks launched by the troops of the Division was a huge success. It was targeted at the camps of the terrorists and destroyed them, killing over 41 Boko Haram members”.

The Spokesman of the 7 Division, Col Muhammed Dole, could not respond to email enquiry sent him for confirmation of the incident.

But the state deputy governor, Zanna Mustapha, who visited the troubled Gwoza area along side the General Officer Commanding 7 Division, Major General Obidha Ethan without media coverage, came back very late on Tuesday, held a marathon closed door meeting at the office of the deputy governor during the most part of yesterday.
