LEADERSHIP gathered from a source that the yet-to-be identified man was smoking a substance suspected to be Indian hemp with his friends when they suddenly heard the blaring siren from a police vehicle.

The deceased and his friends were said to have fled in different and he unfortunately, did not notice the deep pond that was said to have been overgrown with weeds, following which he plunged into it and died before help could come his way.

The source said the deceased had since been buried at his country home, Umuoka, the community where the incident occurred.
