The heavy rain of last Thursday would forever remain in the memory of the Ayetoro people in the Yewa North local government area of Ogun State as the thunder that accompanied the rain struck dead three teenagers in the town.
According to a statement by the PPRO, Nigeria Police, Ogun State Command, Muyiwa Adejobi, the thunder struck around 7pm.
On October 10, 2014, at about 18:45hrs, during heavy rainfall, thunder struck and killed three teenagers, namely, Sunday Mulero, 13, Dare Olafia, 15, and Sodiq Segun, 15, at Iale (aka Street in Ijoun, Ayetoro area of Ogun State.
Adejobi, in the statement, further stated that the children were playing outside their house when the incident occurred. According to him, policemen who rushed to the scene could not help as the victims were already dead, adding that their corpses had been deposited in the mortuary.
"Divisional Police Officer in charge of Ayetoro Division revealed that the young boys were playing outside their house when thunder struck and killed them instantly.
"The divisional police officer with his officers, rushed down to the scene to possibly rescue the teenagers but were confirmed dead immediately on arrival at the hospital."
"The corpses were kept in the mortuary for necessary actions."
Adejobi further stated that the commissioner for police in the state, Ikemefuna Okoye, has appealed to members of the public to warn their children against playing in the rain.
"The police boss therefore seizes this opportunity to advise the general public to learn from the past so as to adjust our futures, and warn our children to desist from playing under heavy rainfall or engaging themselves in any dangerous activities that could put their lives in a precarious situation precarious."
This particular incident had occurred on many occasions in Ogun State and in many other states.
"CP Ikemefuna Okoye reassures the good people of Ogun State, the command's readiness to harness all available resources to achieve effective policing of the state."
