Eleven out of 45 bandits terrorising Aza and Kintako communities in Lapai local government area of Niger State have been killed even as it is not yet known whether they have a link with Boko Haram.

The state government in a statement by the chief press secretary, Israel Ebije said soldiers deployed to contain the menace of recent attacks on the communities are on top of the situation.

Ebije disclosed that four of the bandits have been arrested and are now with security operatives to give information about the armed group, adding that government cannot confirm whether or not they are affiliated to the dreaded Boko Haram.

He said, "The men of the Nigerian Army are doing a very good job in flushing the armed bandits who invaded Aza and Kintako communities in Lapai local government area of Niger State. We do not know their motive and we also do not know if they are affiliated with Boko Haram. We are, however, optimistic that those arrested so far will give useful information."
