Aggrieved youths of Oghara, Ethiope West local government area of Delta State, yesterday morning staged a war against tanker drivers, accusing them of obstructing major roads in the community.

The youths had sometime last week taken to various streets of Oghara in protest of the death of their kinsman, one John (surname withheld) by a tanker driver while on his way to the office.

The fight broke out when, during an argument, one of the drivers told the villagers they could do nothing.

An eyewitness said the irate youths, armed with broken bottles, chanted war songs and moved towards the tanker drivers' park where they reportedly attacked some of their officials, leading to a confrontation in which dangerous weapons were freely used.

Police officers at the Oghara Police Division who did not want their names in print said they arrested six persons and restored law and order in the area, adding that injured persons had been taken to the hospital.
