A suspected drunken man was found dead after he fell and hit his head on a pavement at Alaba, near Suru, along Lagos-Badagry Expressway in Lagos State, yesterday.

The unidentified man was said to have drunk local gin popularly known as 'paraga' in local parlance, in Lagos and was seen staggering before he fell, hitting his head on concrete pavement

LEADERSHIP gathered that people around the area who sell the local gin quickly packed their items and vanished from the area.

A policeman attached to Orile Police Station who spoke on condition of anonymity disclosed that from the information he gathered, "the man died from the local gin he consumed. The man fell and hit his head on the pavement and gave up the ghost. Probably there was nobody to assist him to the hospital; he would have survived. The back of his head is swollen while blood gushed out from it."
