Residents of Victoria Island broke into tears when a heavy panel fell on a carpenter, killing him at the weekend.

The accident, which killed the victim identified as simply as Kunle, occurred at RCF Construction Company at Eko Atlantic, Victoria Island.

A police source disclosed that the accident happened around 1:20am. The source said who spoke under the condition of anonymity said the accident was reported at Victoria Island police station at about 11:25am of the same date.

LEADERSHIP gathered that victim, a carpenter with same company, was trying to tighten a nut on the Barching plant marching when suddenly the nut got worn out and the panel fell on him.

Blood gushed out of his body as he became unconscious.

He was immediately rushed to the General Hospital by his co workers where he was said to have given up the ghost. The body was then deposited at the same hospital mortuary.
