Suspected cultists in Kogi State have shifted their activities from the campuses into the city centres where parents of the victims could watch how they kill their children.

This is just as men of the state's police command have stepped up efforts at bringing down the escalating cases of cult war in the state, especially in Lokoja, the state capital.

Residents of Lokoja, metropolis, could no longer sleep with both eyes closed anymore as the cult war has spread widely within the city.

The cultists now trail their targets to their residences or wherever they are taking refuge, drag them out and kill them in the public glare.

In the last few days, no fewer than seven of the suspected cultists have met their Waterloo in the hands of their rivals at Adakolo, Kabawa and Ganaja areas of the city, while their parents watched helplessly.

According to sources, it all started when "Elebe Boys" and "Eiye Boys" had serious altercation which resulted in the death of two members of Elebe Boys who are now on vengeance mission.

The spokesman of the state police command told LEADERSHIP Sunday that he would soon address the media on the development.
