

BMW Car Hits Stationary Vehicle, Kills 2 In Delta

BY NOSA ERESOYEN, Asaba

There was mild drama at Ibusa Junction in Delta State when a man in a blue BMW car with registration no FT394LSR on Wednesday night, rammed into a brown Toyota Carina (HS251KJA), leaving two persons feared dead while it broke into the perimeter fence of Saint John Bosco's Catholic Church.

The unfortunate incident, which left the two victims reeling and incapacitated, occurred at about 10pm on Wednesday. The event saw sympathisers battling to save the lives of the victims.

It was gathered that the owner of the Toyota Carina and his wife, were on their way to Okpanam Road when suddenly the car ran out of Premium Motor Spirit (PMS), popularly called fuel.

It was learnt that in view of this development, the man parked his car beside the fence of the Catholic Church with his wife inside and ran out to a nearby filling station with a gallon to purchase fuel when suddenly an alleged drunk driver on high speed, coming from A Division Police Station, rammed into the Toyota Carina leaving two persons seriously injured and unconscious.

But two police officers, who did not want their names in the print, told
